ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention relates a calculator capable of displaying processing status and stopping processing and method of the same. In the present invention, an output unit displays a message representing that the expression is in processing and a counter begins to count after inputting an expression into the calculator. When the counter reaches a first predefined value and the calculation is not finished, a terminating message is shown to inquire the user to choose whether to continue or stop the processing.